Multi Rather Than Bi

THE SPECIAL STATUS OF J. T. Thorson, a former member of mer president of the Exchequer Court, when he addressed the Canadian Club here last week, and there is no doubt that he spoke from a deep knowledge of our country and a sincere desire to see it prosper in unity.

On the topic of bilingualism, however, Mr. Thorson appears to prefer a legal approach to the sitsuation rather than a pragmatic one. He quite rightly points out, of course, that Canada today consists of more than the two founding races, and that there are more than five million Canadians who look back to origins that are neither British nor French. He cites himself as an example.

He therefore sees any attempt * to impose bilingualism on the nation as an infringement of rights, and notes with disapproval the recent move to require federal civil servants to be bilingual if they wish apromotion in Ottawa positions.

Mr. Thorson is correct in his reading of the BNA Act, which does not call for equal rights for French and English outside of Quebec and federal courts, the Quebec e legislature and the federal parliament. But the Canadian problem of language cannot today be kept within these narrow limits. If federal civil servants must regularly deal with persons who speak only -French, then it is natural that pre-* ferment would be given to employees proficient in both tongues. They care of more value to the service by reason of their ability.

And with more than six million French-Canadians in the country it is impossible to overlook the fact that there must be communication, particularly on the official level, between them and their national government in addition to the requirements of the legislative halls and

How much this could be empha-I Quebec as a province of Can-sized by Ottawa as a concession to ada was emphasized by the Hon. a disturbed Quebec rather than a recognition of a practical need is parliament from Ontario and for- a matter of degree rather than of principle. Few Canadians will become exercised, as Mr. Thorson apparently is, over the bilingualism of our coinage, postage stamps and other nation-wide facilities.

> From an enlightened point of view, our biracialism with its attendant duality of language and customs can be a source of strength and durability. More than any country, Canada epitomizes the principle of national co-operation and cohesion without sacrifice of racial characteristics—a principle toward which the world, on a large scale, is striving today. This is no time to abandon our 200-year-old experiment by trying to curb the language and other aspirations of the second-largest group in the population, provided they are carried out within the framework of Canada as a single, sovereign nation.

Much of Mr. Thorson's comment is made from the standpoint of the 26 per cent of Canadians who are of neither French nor British origin. This newer component of our population rightly has an important and honored position in the nation. But regardless of the increasing part it plays in our national community it is undeniable that the French do hold a different and unique place. Mr. Thorson indeed recognizes this and argues that Quebec should be treated differently from the rest of the provinces, with the hope that the benefits of closer integration in the national fabric would eventually persuade that province to relinquish its

It is nevertheless encouraging to read Mr. Paul Martin's report on what has been accomplished in the field, particularly as the Canadian effort relates to university training for alien students. The minister of external affairs told parliament last week that the average cost to the Canadian government for students coming from foreign countries to universities in Canada is $5,467 a year.

Beneficiaries are young men and women from the new nations of Africa, from South East Asia, India, Pakistan, and the Caribbean area, 515 of whom have graduated from Canadian universities under the plan. The largest group comprises engineers. Next come students of agriculture, social sciences, eco- possible from the aid program.

foreign aid to less fortunate peoples The educational endeavor inwith a slight feeling of guilt sug- volved a relatively minor part of the over-all foreign aid program expenditures (just over $8 million in a total of more than $259 million in 1965.)

The Canadian contribution may be less than many Canadians think it should be. But at least, if the road to better living for the underdeveloped countries is to be charted by guidenosts of education-the promising path to helping others to help themselves - Canada has lighted a few candles. The illumination should grow in the darker areas to which 504 of the 515 graduates have returned once their study periods in this country were completed.

Few Canadians will begrudge the expenditure. They will accept it the more enthusiastically if the government can show from follow-up studies that the students and the the natural sciences, medicine, countries to which they return are education and, in diminishing order, receiving the maximum benefit

The Victoria member is quite correct in stating that "it's the redecide how much will be spent on higher education not . . . presidents and particularly lame duck presidents." But it is equally true that British Columbia is in a preferred considerations.

MR. WALDO SKILLINGS position to know what universities

The fact that Mr. Skillings attaches to him the "lame duck" label strengthens Dr. Macdonald's position. Since the UBC president is leaving the university of his own free will at the end of this term, he no longer must censor his opiniions to avoid offending the consponsibility of the legislature to troller of the purse strings - the government. cuts in the Far East command based on

The latest withdrawals - outlined last week in a defence white paper - will reduce the number of British servicen tside Europe to about 100,000. Details of their geographical dispersement have not been announced but it is likely the main concentration will be around Singapore with smaller garrisons at Bahrein in the Persian Gulf and Hong Kong and minor presences at Mediterranean and Indian Ocean bases.

As with earlier moves of the kind, the cuts have been dictated by the need to improve the balance of payments by curtailing foreign exchange expenditure. The government hopes by mid 1968 to have reduced the annual total rate of foreign exchange spending on defence by at least £74 million as compared with

The planners are counting on the current cuts to contribute substantially to the overall reduction.

As economy measures, the withdrawals have been welcomed. The eriticism - an all-party group of MPs has formed to oppose the white paper is that the cuts were not extens enough. At the same time, however, they are bound to accentuate the defence ministry's already severe strategic and diplomatic headaches.

Death of a Hope

IN 1955, on the opening day of the convention that brought the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations together after 20 years of civil war, Walter P. Reuther wound up a dramatic unity pledge with these words: "We shall fight together, we shall march together, we shall build together and we shall win together that tomorrow for the American

His recent announcement that he and his fellow officers in the giant United Automobile Workers are quitting their executive posts in the merged federation epitomizes the death of that birthday hope. The auto union insists that the top-level boycott portends no withdrawal from continued affiliation, but few leaders inside the federation will put much stock in such assurances.

The split has been becoming increasingly certain for several months; it is improbable that anything can halt it now. Much of the difficulty grows out of differences in organizational, political and social philosophy between Mr. Reuther and George Meany, the federation's president.

Much also stems from Mr. Reuther's frustration in his ambition to succeed Mr. Meany at the A.F.L.-C.I.O helm. With his sixtieth birthday approaching, the auto union chief has apparently decided that time is running out to demonstrate his own capacity to energize a labor movement that long ago lost its forward drive. Mr. Meany, who will be 73 this August, will certainly not step aside meekly to give Mr. Reuther his

If the result is a return to jurisdic tional warfare on the organization front and to more aggressive threats at the bargaining table, all labor will pay, the price in diminished public support and political effectiveness. The last election in which labor-endorsed candidates fared badly, indicated that labor's prestige is already low. Fratricidal conflict can only make it lower, to the detriment of labor

The main problem, briefly, is that Britain has inherited a wide range of defence commitments in both the Middle and Far East. The United States, deeply embroiled farther east, does not want to assume the additional responsibility of maintaining stability in the Indian Ocean area and counts on Britain to do that job. The more troops are withdrawn, the more difficult it is for Britain to fulfil her commitments both to the countries of the area and to the United States.

In response to this situation, the government has begun to re-define its commitments. Defence in future is to mean primarily deterrence with British forces acting as highly-mobile peace keepers equipped to prevent local disturbances from escalating. But in adjusting to the new role - which would require smaller force levels than at present — the planners run into a number of further problems.

Inherently Unstable

For instance, some of the areas here Britain has traditionally maintained strong bases are inherently unstable. Both Aden and Singapore are examples. Troop withdrawals are bound ean unemployment, adding just so more kindling to the potential hot spot. It is conceivable, in other words, that troop withdrawals might contribute to the kind of conflagration that the British forces are supposed to prevent under their new role.

Firm decisions on the future of the 63,000-man NATO contingent in Germany are deferred pending the completion of the alliance's re-appraisal of its strategy and of the current talks between Britain, the United States and Germany on the vexing question of offset costs. West Germany is footing £54 million of Britain's £94 million annual foreign exchange bill for the upkeep of the Rhine Army, but the new government in Bonn is refusing to renew the present agreement when it runs out at the end of June. The white paper repeats earlier British threats to withdraw part of the Rhine Army if the Germans refuse to budge.

Difficult Position

Every effort was made during the Anglo-German Common Market meeting last week to keep the problem in the background. But should it actually come to the point of British troops being recalled, Prime Minister Harold Wilson will be placed in a very difficult position. The tripartite offset talks are to resume later this month. Apart from the decision on troops cuts, the white paper was largely an interim statement. It leaves no doubt, however, that the British government is extremely eager to see troops cuts in Europe by both NATO and the Warsaw

It argues that reductions would contribute to the detente between East and West. It also espouses the view that the main job of conventional forces is to ensure that there can be a holding period in face of an attack before nuclear weapons come into play. Fewer troops with less equipment than at present could handle this assignment, it argues

On behalf of the B.C. Physical Education Council I would like to express our great disappointment that the department of education has elected to discontinue construction of gymnasium facilities in schools throughout

Attempts by teachers working in this field to expose youngsters to programs of physical activity which will contribute to their physical well-being and enjoyment will, under the present policy, be completely frustrated. This policy amounts to discrimination against a subject which is required by law in our present school system

It is encouraging to note that school board and school trustee representation on this issue has already been made through appropriate channels to the department. The minister of national defence has persuaded the cabinet, against the advice of the country's foremost military leaders, to adopt a military system that has been studied and rejected by nations which have far more experience than has Canada.

If, in time, the minister is proven wrong, it will be difficult and ruinously expensive to correct the errors and, during the period that this is being done, the country must depend on other nations for its defence and will be unable to give military support to its allies. Every commodity has its price and we in Canada should know that friends, as well as enemies, can threaten our freedom.

The actions of the prime minister and his cabinet should be of grave concern to every Canadian.-F. E. Grubb, 1998

The Vorster government is encouraging investments adjacent black countries in an apparent attempt to implement the Verwoerd policy of establishing a modus vivendi much warmer than mere coexistence with the neighbors.

In pursuing this policy, Rhodesia in its present circumstances will be an embarrassment to the South Africans. They can live much more gracefully with their neighbors if Rhodesia returns to the course of gradual democratization envisioned by the 1961 constitution. Few in the U.S. government believe

As motor companies like Ford and GMC shut down and more skilled laborers migrate to South Africa, as the tobacco crop backs up in the ware houses, and as the pace of investment slows, the mood to seek a solution short of insurrection is bound to grow. A party in opposition to the Smith cabinet is now being formed in Salisbury.

The British constantly interject themselves as intermediaries between the Americans and the Soviets and the time may now be ripe for the Americans to serve as a decongestant in the impasse between the Rhodesians and the British. A Lonely Campaign For Menon

By MYRON L. BELKIND

BOMBAY - V. K. Krishna Menon, the controversial left ist who stalked United Nations corridors for 10 years, is fighting a lonely campaign today to remain in the mainstream of Indian politics. With the aid of a translater, he walks through the crow electoral district of northeast industrial workers, businessmen and some farmers — urging the residents to return him to Parliament as an independent candidate Tues-

Five years ago, when he ran for the same seat, he scored almost a 2-to-1 victory over a right-wing independent.

But then Menon had the strong personal backing lot Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru; he was a candidate of the ruling Congress party; and, as defence minister, he was riding a wave of personal popularity following Indian seizure of Portugal's nearby enclave of Goa.

Today, Menon, nearing is campaigning with his back to the wall.

Nehru is gone — and so is Congress party support. A Bombay nominating commit-tee, led by Railways Minister S. K. Patil, rejected his bid for renomination. Menon, in anger, resigned from Optimists could console themselves, looking at this Bomare business, that we'd actually spent less than we did on the Arrow. This was the project we stopped so we could spend our one and a half billion bucks more wisely on Bobcats, on mult-million abandonments at Winisk and Great Whale River, on repairing and overhauling that magnificent aircraft carrier we possess (don't ask what we're doing with an aircraft carrier; don't you want to

So why do we spend the billion and a half annually? Clearly, it is not for defence. That's why we have never taken the issue seriously before and given you either long attacks on that villainous Bill Lee or much praise of the hymn-singing corporal, Paul Hellyer. We do give both these men credit for stimulating on defence we should get the following: (A) A sense of national pride such as is provided by the centennial tattoos and the changing of the guard pantomime on the lawn of the Parliament Buildings; (B) An economic stimulus of our manufactures; (C) An excuse (perhaps the right to appear just) in being given a share of American defence contracts; (D) A training program for "dropouts" that provides the economy with substantial num-bers of people with skills, while keeping them off the unemployed rolls and (E) The continued satisfaction of the myths which sustain those officers and ex-officers who have lanced the wild blue yonder or dragged a BBC "A" in a wardroom or stood stiff in blanco and

Up goes the skyline, down go the cables: Les Strachan's underground force is at work

This is no sinister plot. Les Strachan and his B.C. Telephone Company construction force are building communications facilities for British Columbians.

When Les Strachan was a torpedo gunner's mate in the Royal Canadian Navy, he was found occasionally peering out from a porthole. Sometimes he was on the bridge. And it wasn't uncommon for him to be roused from his hammock in the dark of night to help deal with emergency.

Times change. But Les Strachan's life today still bears some resemblance to his Navy days.

He still goes to sea occasionally—to supervise placing of submarine telephone cable.

He peers down manholes-to see that underground telephone installations are progressing efficiently.

He is found sometimes on a bridgewhere his crews erect telephone cables high above water.

He's Always On Call

And it's not uncommon for him to be roused from his bed to supervise restoration work when an emergency knocks out a part of the B.C. Telephone Company's vast $475 million communications network.

Les Strachan is construction superintendent for B.C. Telephone's Coastal Division, which covers the populous Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley regions of British Columbia. Under his supervision, a 200-man work force builds millions of dollars worth of outside telephone equipment every year—in fact, more than $6 million worth in 1966 alone in Coastal Division.

Similar forces build similar facilities in the company's Island, Interior and Northern Divisions, erecting the outside distribution facilities which link telephone subscribers together through central office switching

Mr. Strachan's force makes up nearly half of the total outside construction personnel among B.C. Telephone Company's more than 7,200 employees.

It includes foremen, supervisors and company-trained craftsmen skilled in such things as cable splicing, microwave antenna installation, pole setting, underground construction, submarine cable placing and the precarious high-level work involved in lacing cable to the outer edges of bridges like Lions Gate and Pattullo.

It includes such men as Pete Wold of Abbotsford, a telephone man for 14 years, seen feeding cable into the manhole pictured above, while Mr. Strachan keeps a signal hand up and his eyes on progress

60 Miles Go Underground

The Strachan construction force assignment for 1966 included placing nearly 60 miles of telephone cable underground and building 14 miles of new underground conduit reached through manholes like the

And this represents only a small part of the total expansion program of B.C. Telephone in British Columbia, where its capital expenditures exceed $1 million every week as the company and its employees strive to meet the province's rapidly-growing communication requirements.

In the North, on Vancouver Island, in the Interior; in the cities and in the countryside-the rugged, mountainous countryside that is British Columbia-telephone men like Les Strachan and Pete Wold are in action constantly building the telephone plant so essential to the province and its

TORPEDOES TO TELEPHONES

Les Strachan, 46, was born and raised in Vancouver. He served for eight years with the RCN, was aboard HMCS Saguenay in 1940 when she was torpedoed in the North Atlantic and aboard HMCS Athabasca in 1943 when a glider bomb hit the ship, killing five Canadian sailors.

He has been a B.C. Telephone man since 1946 and has been Coastal Division construction superintendent, with headquarters in Burnaby, since February, 1961.

He lives with his wife and five children on Dumfries Street, Vancouver.

WINTER RALLY

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 12, 1967— The remarkable Datsun 1300 sedan proved its strength Sun-day by coming home ahead of the field for an outright win of the tougest of them all—the Ca-nadian Winter Rally.

Prepared by Toronto's St. Clair Motor Service, the winner was the same Datsun sedan that is suddenly becoming a common sight on Canada's streets and highways.

Through 1,200 miles of wind and snow, driver Klaus Ross and navigator John Bird kept the sturdy Datsun on course and on time. The Canadian Winter Rally is traditionally hard on crews and harder on cars. This year, only 59 of the 101 starters reached the finish

For different reasons. Some brought in money for their Savings Accumulation Accounts. New savings customers picked up their Churchill Crowns or their gift sets of Canadian coins.

Others came in to buy Savings Deposit Certificates or Guaranteed Investment Receipts. Clients whose investments we manage came to discuss their portfolios. Or a pension plan. Many came to discuss an estate or trust ... these are still our original and basic services.

And the telephones rang. We had requests for mortgage loans. We were asked to sell houses or to buy them. We took on rental agent duties in large developments. And many companies called us about bond trusteeship and the myriad complicated duties we perform for business.

Ours is a busy field, and a competitive one. But as our country and our competition grows, we seem to hold our position well: Canada's leading trust company.

Sommerville earned the grand aggregate award as he skipped his rink to eight victories in the two major events. His mainland quartet also earned the top spot in the "B" primary by defeating Alberni foursome skipped by Barry Myers, 8-2, in the final. Jook Collier and Stu Tall of the host club finished third and fourth in the "B" primary.

Vancouver skip Bill Osborne captured the "A" primary, getting by the tough Victoria Curling Club rink of Gar Taylor, 9-7, in the final. Taylor, calling shots for Ken Sturrock, Laurfe Perlette and Mary Hodges, had been the only unbeaten skip as play went into Saturday night's late draws.

Aussies Turn On Heat In Final Game of Tour

VANCOUVER (CP) -The Australian Wallabies gave 6,200 fans a brilliant display of wide-open rugby in trouncing British Columbia All-Stars 24-11 Satur-

It was the Wallabies' final match of a five-month tour of Britain, France and Canada and gave them a record of 19 wins, 14 losses and three ties.

Australia, which opened its two-game Canadian stand Thursday with an 11-6 victory over University of British Columbia Thunderbirds, dominated most of Saturday's match.

B.C. came to life midway through the final half, but by that time Australia had built up solid 19-3 lead.

SMOOTH COMBINATION The smooth combination of scrum-half Ken Catchpole and standoff Phil Hawthorne led the powerful Australian attack. Catchpole scored one try and set up a nother. Hawthorne kicked a penalty goal and firee converts and set up two other trys with sharp laterals.

Australia's other points came from trys by wingers Stewart Boyce and Russell Tulloch, eighth-man John O'Gorman and centre John Brass.

centre John Brass.

British Columbia's scoring came on two trys by winger Jim Ryan and a penalty goal and a convert by fullback Barrie Burnham. Burnham missed several other kicking attempts, once hitting the unright.

Highlight of the game for B.C.
came 25 minutes into the second half when Ryan, the fleet winger from Victoria, grabbed a 11-3 lead at the intermission. The Wallabies left Sunday for

If you think the world's gone flat... discover South Africa

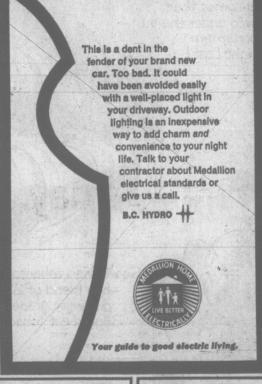

Remember your first holidays abroad? New adventure in every cobbled lane. Hotels and shops where dollars were big and credit cards unknown. The one-in-a-million chance you'd meet someone from home. Your passport was packed with excitement.

It still is in South Africa. A vigorous, prosperous Western republic, overnight from the every-day... from anywhere in Europe. Uncommonly comfortable for North Americans who share our Dutch-English-French heritage. With a two-ocean beach 3000 miles long, and sunshine 357 days a year. A change-of-size playground for golf, surfing, road racing, game fishing, night life—and motor cruising through great game reserves. Or the linuary of doing nothing.

All for less than you'd spend seeing Europe again. Twelve airlines jet you to South Africa for $754, round trip from New York. Cruise ships from Southampton make it a tropical lark for $512. Holiday resorts offer lodgings with meals for as little as $7 daily.

Poised and easy in his acting his performance reflects the considerable experience he has had with prominent American touring companies and abroad. All the winsome charm, the vibrancy that one could wish for the role of the heroine Norina, is contained in the petite person of 26-year-old Eleanor Calbes.
Couple with this the fact that she has a pure, flexible warmshe has a pure, flexible warm-oned soprano with a consider-able command of coloratura, hat she moves well and acts with animation, and we have a orable Norina.

Father of Bomb Denied Secrets

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — r. J. Robert Oppenheimer, who helped develop the atomic bomb and later was denied access to U.S. atomic secrets as security risk, died Saturday night at the age of 62.

Oppenheimer died of throat cancer at his home here where he spent 18 years until 1966 as director of the Institute for Advanced Study.

In 1954 Oppenheimer was denied access to atomic secrets as a security risk. The Atomic Energy Commission found that although Oppenheimer was loyal, he was a security risk, in part because his association with known Communists "extended far beyond the tolerable limits of prudence and self-restraint."

The tall, thin, chain-smoking Oppenheimer freely acknowl-edged associations with Communists in the late 1930s and early 1940s. However, he denied

President Eisenhower issued an order calling on every department head to review every case in which there had been a full FBI field investigation, as there had been in Oppenheimer's case.

That July 7, AEC Chairman Lewis S. Strauss ordered a review of Oppenheimer, in keeping with the president's general order, to see whether he was a security risk. In December of that year, Struss took to Eisenhower all the information the AEC had on the scientist.

The president then directed that a "blank wall be placed between Dr. Oppenheimer and the voted Kinsman of the Year."

"I did not regard them as dangerous," he later said, "and some of their declared objectives seemed to me desirable."

HONORED FOR WORK

In 1963, nine years after closing its secrets to Oppenheimer, he AEC gave him in this highest honor, the $50,000 Enrico Fermi Award, named after the late Italian scientist. He received the award from President Johnson amid speculation that he might return to secret government work.

However, Oppenheimer chose fo remain in his post as director of the institute, a post he resigned June 30 last, saying he wanted additional time "to seek an understanding, both historious contacts and said the dual plants of the movement, charged that mass media is controlled by advertisers and said the dual sponsorship of some television programs by car and beer companies contributed to impaired drivers—"the untried mitority."

PEOPLE WENT HAPPILY TO VOTE

Rain May Aid India's Congress Party

NEW DELHI (AP) — India's general elections shifted Sunday to New Delhi and the capital's voters happily got drenched in the first rainfall in 136 days.

Preliminary reports indicated at least 70 per cent of the city's 1,700,000 eligible voters went to the polls despite the showers.

The large turnout was attributed to a hard-fought race between the country's ruling Congress party and the Hindu communal-minded Jan Sangh party.

Private Capital For Hall?

Business Favors Close-In Centre

There is a strong possi-bility that Victoria's con-vention centre problem will solved by private capital, it was learned today.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

When everybody's pet, Juliette, was turned off the musical filler which followed Saturday NHL games, on CBC-TV, it must have seemed like the end of the world for her.

But it turned out to be a fortunate turn in the talented blonde singer's career.

The musical filler ran right into trouble from the start of this semester and has already had a complete change of format and

On the other hand, Juliette is ever.

She's already been seen on CBC-TV's Christmas
Day special, in 100 Years Young, a New Year's Day
Centennial colorcast; has a weekly CBC radio show, will be a guest on an upcoming Flashback, and is making as many personal appearances as she can

On Feb. 27, she really comes into her own with an hour-long color telecast on the public corporation's Show of the Week.

The pre-show billing suggests she will handle a greater variety of material than she's ever tried before including a good deal of dancing.

Juliette has been the butt of many jokes and taker Juliette has been the butt of many jokes and taken more than her share of criticism for her post-hockey performances. However, she had a long run so the viewers must have been behind her just as T'm sure they will be when she goes the hour-long route.

It is a fact this corner will be 100 per cent on her side, so go out and wow 'em Juliette.

The color television explosion is slowly but surely making its presence known around the globe. Britain is the latest country to reverse itself with announcement of a massive technical shakeup to make color TV more Color TV will be made available on all channels

Independent Television (ITV) as well as the BBC's two channels, within weeks.

Earlier the government had announced that color telecasting would be confined to the BBC's second channel and start toward the end of this year.

The new plan which will allow almost immediate color involves a change in the line standards, the number of electronic lines into which a television picture is divided.

QUEREC (CP)—The current furore in Quebec's educational system, generally free of striles util recent months, is a spectacular side-effect of the big thenges rippling across the generally during the past feedage.

Sometimes labelled "the quiet revolution," especially during the 1968, the changes have come partly as a result of deliberate government a ction, partly as a consequence of hibrarie government a ction, partly as a consequence of hibrarie government a ction, partly as a consequence of hibrarie government a ction, partly as a consequence of hibrarie government a ction, including the farmers which may be inclined to have long larged in this field.

And the priority given education has enhanced the "status" claims of teachers. They want to be regarded, not as ordinary employees of the school system, but rather as a professional group treated generously, and confided in by those in administrative charge of Quebec education.

Legislation enacted in Quebec Priday orders 12,000 Roman Catholic teachers who have been on strike to resume their duties on Monday, and establishes as a lary scale applicable for unionized teachers across the province.

Tanzania Takes Over Its Private Industry

WILLISTON:

Buttle Hearing To Be Limited

will be heard.

'Last week, Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan urged that all those with something to say 'not just the water board' 'be.

A blueprint for socialist change called on the people to control their own major industries.

neth Kiernan, Mr. Keenan said, "ask Mr. Kiernan — it's a ticklish matter."

He also referred to Mr. Williston's statement in the House Thursday that the government deplores recent criticism of the PCB and claims it was under political direction.

Mr. Willist to n added this morning that the government has only recommended a course of action to the PCB.

He said the government was criticized for allegedly ordering the PCB to issue the permits and now was being criticized for not issuing orders to it.

"You can't have it both ways. How can you be independent and not independent," he said. Mr. Williston said the PCB was making its own decisions but the government had recommended "the smartest thing for it to do was to adhere to the specific request of the court which had said only that the water board should be given enough time to complete preparation of its material."

The appeal court dismissed the permits because the B.C. Research Council's report to the PCB, on behalf of the water board, had stated more time was needed to research the potential harm — if any inherent in the Western Mines plan.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Keith Clinard, age 12, of High Point, North Carolina, for his question:

How Dense Is Sirius? Search the sky tonight for the brightest star. But watch out, or you may pick a planet. Tonight, giant Jupiter in the eastern part of the sky is more than twice as bright as the brightest star. And Venus, far over in the west, is more than twice as bright as the brightest star. And Venus, far over in the west, is more than twice as bright as Jupiter. You can tell that these two are planets because they shine with steady, unblinking light. But first we must transport imaginary samples from each star to the earth, where they can be compared under the same gravity conditions. A cupful of average material from the sun would weigh a little more than three cupfuls of average material from Sirius. The sample cupful from the sun would weigh 1½ times as much as a cupful of ordinary water. The Sirius sample would equal the weight of a little less than half a cupful of water.

We have heard so much about this mighty fortress that we assume it to be made of the most durable of rocks. Its. eastern slope towers 1,400 feet above the Mediterranean waters and in pictures its steep cliffs certainly seem to be made of granite or perhaps even some barder stone. This, however, is far from true. The mighty Rock of Gibraltar is made mostly of limestone, and limestone is rated as one of the earth's soft or medium-soft minerals. The chalky material tends to chip and crack and dissolve in running water. The pounding surf chews chunks from the foot of limestone cliffs and crumbly limestone peaks are eroded by

Evidence that reinforces this rice was found by Drs. I. Fowler, C. E. Morris, and T. Now a chemical that injures lymphocytes (white blood cells) has been found in the blood and cerebrospinal fluid of patients with multiple sclerosis—antiwith multiple sclerosis—anti-bodies that tend to destroy the myelin sheath which sur-

Another remarkable observation which could lead to the discovery of the cause of multiple sclerosis is the dis-covery by Drs. I. H. Pattision, E. J. Field, and P. A. CANADIAN DATSUN WINS first overall

WINTER RALLY Toronto, Ont., Feb. 12, 1967— The remarkable Datsun 1300 sedan proved its strength Sun-day by coming home ahead of the field for an outright win of the tougest of them all—the Ca-nadian Winter Rally.

Prepared by Toronto's St. Clair Motor Service, the winner was the same Datsun sedan that is suddenly becoming a common sight on Canada's streets and highways.

Through 1,200 miles of wind and snow, driver Klaus Ross and navigator John Bird kept the sturdy Datsun on course and on time. The Canadian Winter Raily is traditionally hard og crews and harder on cars. This year, only 59 of the 101 starters reached the finish line.

This victory is no accident. Datsun has become a consistent winner in major events throughout the world. In the 1967 Canadian Winter Rally, the lone Datsun entry earned the respect of all.

Private Capital For Hall?

Business Favors Close-In Centre

There is a strong possi-bility that Victoria's convention centre problem will be solved by private capi-tal. it was learned today. Convention centre study com-mittee chairman Clyde Savage declined comment on the likeli hood of private construction other than to say "the com mittee will investigate every possibility — and the building of the centre by private capital is one of the possibilities.

If built by private capital the centre could operate under a lease-back arrangement or it could tie in with a new hotel-motel complex for the downtown

"I am only sure on one thing at present," said Mr. Savage. "The centre will be built, and it must be built close enough to the main centre to bring revenue into the downtown area. A convention centre on the outskirts would do little or pothing for our more hands of the control of the contro
